However, I don't know how to do it. Thanks in advance! A: Use strcpy(). #include #include int main(void) { char *a = "HELLO WORLD"; char b = (char) malloc(sizeof(a)); memcpy(b,a,strlen(a)+1); printf("%s ",b); return 0; } Or better: use strdup(). It makes it a bit more difficult to go beyond static allocation (where you can rely on the fact that strings on the stack are not going to go away). #include #include int main(void) { char *a = strdup("HELLO WORLD"); char *b = malloc(strlen(a)+1);
